SLAKESHIP CREATES EXCITEMENT IN LOCAL PALACE OF JOY

With a few more experiences of the kind that happened in a well known Broad street third parlor, yesterday afternoon, a prohibition wave is likely to hit this town and with terrific force at that.

A snake, not the kind that are supposed to exist in the disordered brains of over indulging toppers, but a real live reptile, made its appearance on the bar just as about a dozen patrons were mopping the perspiration from their brows and preparing to get outside of a long cold one. Several of the bystanders did not need to finish the mopping act. The sweat just naturally poured where it had oozed out of the pores.

There was a general break to get away from the snake, and, after the first shock of the excitement had subsided somewhat, to dispose of it.

Many and varied were their plans suggested. One man wanted to have it caught and dropped into a whiskey barrel, so that it would drink itself into delirium tremens and die of its own accord. As this plan would not improve the booze to any appreciable extent, it was abandoned as not being feasible.

Another bystander had an inspiration. He wanted to sprinkle his snake-bits with gasoline and set fire to it. This plan was considered to be a trifle dangerous, as it would have been liable to raise the fire insurance on the block which would have been necessary to replace the present one.

Many other suggestions, equally as unique, were offered, but it remained for the driver of a beer wagon, who happened to be in the crowd, to come to the rescue.

He calmly picked up the snake and deposited it gently but firmly in the back yard.

How the snake happened to make its appearance in the jag foundry at such an opportune—or inopportune if you like—stage of the game was a mystery for some time, but the facts finally leaked out.

The beer keg smasher had found the snake on the street, just outside of the saloon, as it was crawling away from a garbage can, and seeing that the reptile was perfectly harmless, had carried it into the wet goods emporium just to create a little excitement.

That he succeeded goes without saying and now quite a contingent of well known people who develop a thirst on hot days are laying for that beer man.

FREE READING ROOM TO BE OPENED JUNE 18

PUBLIC ENTERPRISE OF METHODIST CHURCH COMFORTABLY APPOINTED

A noteworthy event in the social life of Globe will occur Friday evening, June 18, when the new reading room of St. Paul's Methodist Episcopal church will be thrown open to the public with a suitable program of music, recitations and speeches.

Through the energy of Rev. E. G. Decker and other interested workers of the church, new furnishings are being added daily to the equipment of the room and the work of finishing the interior decorations is being rapidly pushed to completion.

The walls of the room will, according to present plans, be tinted a salmon color, and the ceiling will be wood stained or painted in some dark color that will harmonize well. Three handsome tables, 12 mission chairs and a rocker have already been donated by people interested in the reading room. An individual writing desk will be placed in one corner, and on this there will be a telephone free to the public. Magazine and newspaper racks, 1,000 envelopes with paper to match, 100 window cards, subscriptions to 25 magazines and periodicals, pens, inks, and blotters are other things contributed to the new enterprise.

An ice-water tank will shake the thirst of those using the reading room. The room proper will be 25 feet by 35 feet long not including the kitchen and rest room. The kitchen will be furnished with a gas stove, a cupboard, and a full set of dishes.

The program for the opening night is being arranged by a special committee. Among the speakers will be Superintendent Smith of the Globe public schools.

The interior of the church's audience room is about to undergo a thorough renovation. It will be entirely repainted and the color scheme being a dark cream. Three new grass nile rungs will be put in and a dark green Brussels carpet will be laid over the floor of the pulpit, the steps and that part of the main floor of the church directly in front of the audience seats. A new baptistry ten feet long by five feet wide by four feet deep will be installed with concrete steps leading down into it. Two new pulpit chairs will be provided and there will be an ornamental railing with a curtain in front of the pulpit. A new floor will also be laid in the rear of the church. One of the most desirable alterations will be that to be made on the windows so that they can be easily lowered and raised. This change should render the church cool, even in the hottest weather. The church recently had a gift of fifty new hymnals and of 100 new songbooks for the use of the Sunday school.

THREATENING BLAZE

DEPARTMENT DOES PROMPT WORK IN BLAZE WHICH DAMAGES RESTAURANT

A small blaze, starting from sparks flying from a nearby chimney, threatened for a few minutes to demolish the O. D. Coffee house and the buildings adjoining it late yesterday afternoon. The fortunate discovery of the blaze before it had secured any great headway gave the fire boys a chance to do effective work and extinguish the flames before any material damage was done.

The restaurant was flooded with water, but the damage was nominal and did not prevent the restaurant from accommodating the evening crowd.

Owing to the location of the blaze, it created considerable excitement as had the flames secured a hold on the building, a disastrous fire could hardly have been averted.
